

NextSense Institute

Advancing the RIDBC Renwick Centre experience.

World leading research and education

Australia's leading centre for research and professional studies in the field of education and related service delivery for children with sensory disabilities—offering postgraduate degree programs, webinars, and short courses for educators, therapists, health professionals, parents, and carers.

1,000+

professionals from around the world have received qualifications through NextSense Institute.

Take the next step in your career

Delivered by NextSense Institute in affiliation with Macquarie University, the Master of Disability Studies offers the advanced professional the preparation required to qualify as a Teacher of the Deaf, a teacher of students who are blind or have low vision, or a professional working with people with sensory disability.

Choose from three specialisations:

- Education: Deaf and Hard of Hearing
- Education: Vision Impairment
- Sensory Disability

With courses offered online, affordable fees, and recognition of prior learning (RPL) available, your next step is closer than ever before.

Continuing professional education

—where and when you need it

At NextSense Institute, we're committed to delivering high-quality continuing professional education—in-person and remotely—to meet the professional learning needs of educators, therapists, and health professionals.

But we know not everyone's an expert, so many of our programs are well-suited for parents and caregivers of children with hearing or vision loss—giving you practical skills and strategies to apply in your everyday environments.

Our range of programs are delivered by leading national and international experts who lead their fields, helping us to drive the entire sector forward.

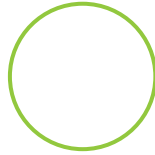

Resources ready for you

The Rydge Family Library provides an extensive and highly specialised collection of books, periodicals, and audio-visual materials in the education of children with sensory disabilities.
